Forecast For Scotland
Issued by Met Office Aberdeen
at 0400 on Tuesday 23 Feb 2021

++ Valid for broadcast between 0600 and 1800

Headline:
Very wet and very windy.

Today:
Overcast with periods of rain, often heavy, particularly across southern Uplands and upland areas of Argyll, Central and Tayside. Southerly winds reaching gale force, perhaps severe gale. Driest, mildest around the Moray Coast and to a lesser extent north Highlands.

Tonight:
Further periods of rain, again heavy across southern and central areas. Southerly gales easing at touch overnight. However Highlands and Islands mainly dry with some clear spells.

Wednesday:
South of Great Glen starting cloudy with occasional patchy rain. Mainly dry and bright conditions across northwest will gradually and erratically push southeast over the rest of the country.

Outlook for Thursday to Saturday:
Generally settled with high pressure extending from south, bringing a lot of dry, occasionally bright weather, westerly winds and seasonally mild temperatures. However Northwest rather cloudy with occasional patchy rain.

(C) Crown Copyright 2021. Published by the Met Office.